SONG OF PLENTY.

BY THOS. HARP.

I come with the sunshine, I lurk in the shadow,
I come with the soft falling rain,
I nurture the richness of upland and meadow;
I nourish and ripen the grain.
The South wind's my henchman, the blue sky's my banner,
And earth is the darling I love;
At noontide I waft scented breezes to fan her,
And I brood her at night like a dove.

Bright hope in the springtime, with blossoms I cherish;
The summer with roses I crown;
And to autumn give cheer, that the poor may not perish,
When the snow clouds of winter sweep down.
In vineyard and cornfield with welcome I'm greeted,
Where joyous are laughter and song;
And hearts warm and thankful, for blessings repeated,
Soft vespers at nightfall prolong.

I love to give more than the reapers can gather,
When harvest time gladdens the land;
That the rich may remember when thanking "our Father,"
To leave for the poor gleaner's hand.
I joy in the fulness of orchard and garden,
With fruit hanging ripe in the air;
So spreading my bounty that no heart may harden,
And none be left out of my care.

BABY BOBOLINK'S CRADLE.

Woven of grasses dry and brown,
With a sprig of clover here and there,
A cosy lining of thistle-down
And a feather dropped from a bird in air—

This is the cradle, dainty and fine,
Love hides away in the meadow sweet,
Down, deep down, and never a sign
To tempt too near little wayward feet.

Down, deep down in the blossoming grass,
That rustles dreamily all day long,
And only the yellow butterflies pass
And the green-gold bees with their humdrum song.

Golden buttercups lean above,
And daisies white with hearts all gold,
Golden lilybels not their love,
And the golden sunshine all doth fold.

What wonder young Bobolink springs to air
With flecks of light in his plumage caught!
What wonder his song's a medley rare
Of all things golden and free and fair,
And a song with ecstasy fraught!

Select Story.

A WOMAN'S HEART;
Or, the Doctors' Duel.

BY GERALD HOLCROFT.

CHAPTER I.

The beautiful Mademoiselle de Limousin is as fair and as frail as a lily. A French blonde, whose deep blue eyes darkened almost to purple by long lashes, it goes without saying that she is the belle of the ball. But she is something more than that, she is almost a siren with that bewitching look which seems to flatter all who woo her To say that the beautiful world of Paris was at her feet was scarcely to exaggerate. She spread the intoxicating fever of love wherever she went, and seemed to live upon admiration.

And what, perhaps, heightened her charm was the general belief that her heart was affected—not by love, fair reader, but by disease. The doctors were generally exercised in mind upon her. How fond they are of studying—simply of course, in the interest of medical science—the maladies of young and beautiful women, needs no comment.

Among the number were two young gentlemen duly armed with powers to go forth and cure or kill. And one of these M. Thibaut, who sought distraction from the monotony of sitting over a big fire, and waiting for rings from the surgery bell, was an invited guest of M. de Limousin. Deeply wounded by the fascinations of Celimene, he determined to know the worst or best at the very earliest opportunity.

"I will not ask you to dance," he said, bending over her. "You know well, if I had my way, you should not dance at all."

"It is ungallant to twit me with my shortness of breath."

"Come with me. You know me better than that," and he led her through the large hall, which was hung with pictures, up a massive stone staircase to a dimly lighted landing, bordered with choice but sickly smelling flowers.

Placing her tenderly in a huge chair, he stood beside her, looking down at the fair bosom, which heaved tumultuously. It might have been the stairs, or a prediction of what was coming. These crises in a woman's life stamp her a dissembler. For although she knows perfectly well that an offer is about to be made, she always affects surprise.

M Thibaut cleared his throat and probably felt the awfulness of the position. Celimene was the only daughter of the principal partner in a large banking establishment. Prudence and love were, in M. Thibaut's case, fortunately hand in hand. Before he allowed himself to fall in love he had convinced himself that Celimene was a prudent choice and then he gave himself up to the fascinations of the charmer.

"You have noticed, you must have noticed, dear Mlle. de Limousin, the great interest I take in your case."

"Yes, I suppose, in a medical point of view, I am interesting," replied Celimene, with an upturned look that nearly turned the young doctor's head.

At the back of the landing two glass doors gave on to a balcony, the length of the house. Thither after a long valse with one of those partners who never will have enough of a good thing, M. Eraste had retreated to cool himself in the crisp night air and enjoy a Turkish cigarette. Throwing away the fag end, he was about to return by the doors, which stood half open, when he saw Celimene and his hated rival, M. Thibaut, whose backs were toward him.

"I am not speaking professionally now," M. Thibaut said. "Let me drop the doctor in the lover. Celimene, will you be my wife?"

M. Eraste's first impulse was to rush forward, defy his rival and carry off Celimene before his eyes—his second to stay and listen. He, like M. Thibaut, was a doctor, and had decided to learn his fate that night, but he had been forestalled.

What of that? Perhaps Thibaut would be refused, and then would come his turn.

"But will you always love me—always?"

The kiss—that is the correct thing upon these occasions—closed the compact, and M. Eraste was as furious as the lovers were happy. Only one word escaped his lips

"Revenge!"

He stole back silently to the balcony to think, and in a few moments returned with a settled determination on his face.

Humming a light air, he made an unnecessary noise in throwing back the glass doors.

"I have the honor of the next dance with you," he said, stopping before Celimene's chair. "Hark! they have already commenced."

"It is a valse. Do not dance, dear Celimene," said Thibaut, in a tone half the pleading of the present lover, half the command of the future husband.

"It is already an engagement, M. Thibaut. Your interference is out of place.

"It is for her heart I fear."

"I will take great care of her."

"I must not break an engagement," Celimine said, with a look of conciliation for Thibaut, as she took the arm of M. Eraste.

Beside, Eraste danced better than Thibaut, and Celimene loved a valse.

At first the accepted lover went to the balcony to smoke and revel in his new happiness. For what is happiness to a Frenchman without his smoke? Then, before he had burned out half a cigarette, an uneasiness fell upon him, and the red light in his rival's eyes. Had he heard the offer of marriage? Why had he looked triumphant as he led away Celimene? Surely he, not Eraste, should look triumphant. Hurling his cigarette to the parterres below he retraced his steps to the ball room.

The blaze of light dimmed his eyes and he looked in vain for Celimene. Joining the line of on-lookers, he saw the whirling couples go by him to the swift strains of the military band, until at last Eraste and his beautiful partner circled by him. But all color had fled from the fair cheeks and Celimene looked like marble.

"Stop! For God's sake, stop! You are killing her!" he cried.

But Eraste either heard or heeded him not.

Thibaut rushed after them but came in collision with the dancers, and found himself cannoned back to the line of on-lookers. The next round he was more successful, and Eraste stopped in his giddy dance and demanded the reason for the interruption.

"Look at your partner," cried Thibaut, seizing her in his arms, and carrying her to an adjoining room. "My God!" he cried, "you have her killed. She is dead!"

CHAPTER II.

No expression of sorrow came from Eraste's lips. He stood looking on calmly at Thibaut's mad grief. The beat of the feet in the adjoining ball room continued—for only a few of the guests had noticed the terrible scene. The beating of Celimene's heart had stopped forever.

Thibaut seized Eraste by the arm and led him apart from the others.

"This is your work. You have murdered her. It is no accident; but malice prepense."

A gleam of triumph came into Eraste's face, but he did not speak.

"The guillotine shall avenge her death."

Going back to the knot of people surrounding the couch on which Celimene lay, Thibaut said in a loud voice, hoarse from passion:

"Behold the murderer! M. Eraste! He knew poor Celimene's condition. He gave her a death dance. Say, friends, shall he not answer for it to the law?"

"Coward!" cried Eraste, stepping forward. "You are unworthy of the name of a Frenchman—unworthy the honorable profession to which you belong. Listen, to me, good friends, I told him just now that I should send my representative to arrange a meeting between us, and vindicate the stain he would place on my reputation. And this is his revenge."

"Come, gentlemen, this is neither the time nor the place to quarrel," said one of the guests.

"True," replied Thibaut, astonished at the effrontery of Eraste.

To contradict Eraste's version would be to risk a charge of cowardice.

"Let it be so. I, not the law, will be the avenger," he said.

* * * * * * *

The snow fell in thick, fleecky flakes as a fiacre drove through the morning fog to the Bois de Boulogne.

"Thank Heaven, it is clearing a little," said Thibaut to M. Fleurant, a mercurial young gentleman, who sat by his side.

"If it were me, I should pray that it might grow denser, for I was supping last night with Mlle. Elsie, the danseuse, and the cliquot was quite too plentiful."

"I am sorry to have had to disturb you."

"Don't name it. I am only too pleased to have the honor of being your second. Oh! this is the rendezvous, I suppose."

The coach stopped, and the two men alighted.

"I couldn't tremble more if I were going to fight myself," Fleurant said. "I think there's something deucedly demoralizing in snow. How do you feel?"

"I am sustained by my lust for revenge."

"Hurrah! Here they come!"

A pair of horses came tolling through the snow, and dragging a large family carriage after them.

M. Eraste, his second, and Dr. Deberle, the celebrated physician, approached the two men who awaited them and saluted them with the utmost politeness. Everything was de rigueur, and the two swords were produced and tested, first by the seconds and then by the combatants.

Each seemed satisfied that the weapon, at least, was equal to the occasion.

Thibaut was unusually calm. He had spent the previous night in grieving for his lost Celimene. Eraste was unusually excited. He had been to a gaming house where his reckless play had brought him alternately good and bad luck. But he had left off looser to a considerable extent. The same hit-or-miss kind of feeling seemed to possess him when his sword first crossed that of his antagonist.

It was to be a duel to the death, and Eraste evidently wished to make short work of it, for, after a few passes, he made a terrible thrust at Thibaut, who parried it with ready skill.

Both were excellent swordsmen, and for full five minutes their weapons clashed, but, as yet, without the infliction of even a scratch. At length Eraste's sword broke at the hilt and fell in the snow. Thibaut restrained the impulse to avail himself of the position, and waited for fresh weapons to be brought from the carriage.

Meanwhile the leaden sky began to scatter such huge flakes of snow that the combatants were nearly blinded. This deferred for some time the combat.

M. Fleurant suggested that the duel should be postponed until the following day, but Thibaut would not listen to him.

He lifted his sword to heaven, reverently, and the name of Celimene escaped his lips.

"Come! let us finish," he said. "The snow has abated."

Again the blades crossed, and the combatants lunged at one another more desperately than before.

The seconds intervened.

M. Thibaut was wounded.

"It is nothing," he said. "A mere scratch." But the blood trickled from his forehead, and made red dots in the newly fallen snow.

M. Fleurant turned pale, and devoutly wished that all was over, even if his friend had fallen.

The wound, which was not serious, being bound up, the duelists returned to their work.

A few more passes, another thrust, another parry, and Thibaut's sword entered Eraste's chest.

Eraste fell into the arms of his second, and Dr. Deberle knelt down to examine the wound.

"It is all over. You can do nothing for me. I understand too well the hurt I have received."

The physician asked a technical question, and receiving an affirmative reply looked grave and shook his head.

"For five minutes at the utmost," he said, in reply to a whisper from Eraste.

"Then I have yet time to confess," the dying man said. "Finding that you had succeeded where I could only meet with failure, the devil tempted me to rob you of your prize. I killed her as surely as you have killed me. Now pardon me as I forgive you.

The two men's hands were clasped.

"Come, Thibaut," whispered Fleurant "we to leave Paris at once. Your man is dead."

A Beggar Millionaire.

The Chicago Inter-Ocean has the following: In the south division of this city stands an elegant residence, almost palatial in its proportions, surrounded by an ample lawn, the evidences around being those of wealth and refinement. It is the home of one of the most prominent of Chicago's many rich men, whose family is recognized as among the most distinguished in local society. Within the mansion the exterior promise of luxury is fulfilled, taste and art and culture having kept pace with the liberal expenditure of money which beautified this home. A genial elderly gentleman is the master. Ripe in the experience of many years of contact with the world, with the warm, hearty richness of nature green within him, this man enjoys the esteem and regard of all who know him or are honored by his hospitality.

There is something of romance about his life, and now and then it is good to turn over the pages of the past to read how men have battled against the adversities and triumphed over obstacles too stupendous for efforts of the majority. A journalist who has the good fortune to be classed among the close friends of this gentleman, sat in the charming library of the home the other day, discussing matters of public concern, respecting which the views of the elder man were desired by this paper. During the conversation, Mr. Blank remarked that it was a curious condition of American society that men of obscure ways should be the leaders of to-day, and the leaders forgotten to-morrow. "And," said he, "it is more remarkable how some of them rise. Take my case for example. Rich and prosperous to-day, I remember with painful vividness a time when I was a vagrant and an outcast, hungering for a crust of bread, miserable in sickness and almost despairing."

The visitor was much surprised at this statement, and said as much.

After sitting in reflective silence for a few moments, Mr. Blank said suddenly, "I've a notion to tell you my story. It is so singular that it may be incredible, and it is certainly not an experience one would think I had gone through."

The reporter expressed a desire to hear the story.

"I will tell you, upon condition that you will never mention my name in connection with it."

The promise of secrecy was readily given.

"I do not propose," said Mr. Blank, as he puffed leisurely a fragrant cigar, "to be so specific that I will worry you. All you want to know is the general circumstances, of course. Well, I came from Devonshire nearly thirty years ago, landing in New York, at about twenty-five, with my wife, a few pounds in my pocket, and a stout heart. I had come to seek my fortune like many young men before me who found their native land unkind in care of them. Almost upon my arrival it was taken sick, and before I had secured any employment a fever seized me, and when, weeks afterwards, I came back to life, my money was gone and we were in debt for rent. My poor wife had made a few dimes here and there doing cheap sewing, but the little she could do was not enough, and much before I was able I rose from my bed to seek for work. Those were sorry days for us I can tell you. Up and down in the streets I wandered, asking every place for work, but I was weak and emaciated, and no one cared to give me employment. I was not worth it, really, and so I went on for two weeks, my health scarcely improving my case becoming more and more desperate. One day, utterly exhausted and discouraged, feeling miserable and sick ready to die, but for my wife, I sank down upon a box that stood against a lamp post on Broadway. I took my hat off that the breeze might cool my burning head, and I guess I so fell asleep. Anyway, when I became conscious of where I was and felt somewhat rested, I arose to put on my hat when some small coins rolled out upon the sidewalk. My heart throbbed as though a miracle had been performed. I picked these up, and found others in my hat. Altogether I had nearly one dollar. There was a good supper for my wife and me, and I had besides got an idea. I said to myself, I was perfectly willing to work for a little money, and no one would employ me; now, since people are willing to give me money without work, I will accept it that way and I did. Every day after that I slouched down at a corner on some public thoroughfare and held out my hat. I asked no one for alms but sat there with my hat out. As fast as any money was dropped in, I transferred it to my pockets. The first day I took in $2.50, and from that time my earnings were never less, and they have run as high as $25 a day. I took to all sorts of tricks to look miserable, and played upon the public, though I was soon as well and vigorous as the best who came along. Well, sir, I kept this business up six years, and at the end of that time I had actually taken in a little over $30,000, of which I had $20,000 in a bank, a little in many banks. I then had two children, and we lived comfortably. When I found had $20,000 I concluded to invest it. I did, I bought stocks, and after quietly speculating two years, I had made $227,000, and concluded to give up my old life and become a gentleman again. I came west. I bought land in this vicinity. In a short time that land more than ever made me a rich man, and to-day I am worth not a penny less than $800,000. That sir, all came from a beggar's hat in the streets of New York. Strange story? I think so myself. Really, it seems that all this was a dream. It does not seem real."

Mr. Blank relighted his cigar, leaned comfortably back in his chair, and remarked, "Never despise a beggar. You can't tell how rich he may be."

The journalist went his way that afternoon, wondering much, envious of the mendicant at the corner, and inclined to turn beggar himself.

The county judge of Denver, Nebraska, was called upon the other day by a country girl, who asked how much he charged for marrying anybody. He replied: "Three dollars," and Sally departed. Yesterday the Judge was summoned to the door and accosted by the same person with the remark that she had come to be married. "Very well," said the judge, but perceiving with astonishment that she was alone, he continued, "Where is the man?" An expression of disappointment passed over Sally's features as she ejaculated, "And don't you find the man for three dollars?"

LIVE BEETLES IN GOLD BANDS—LIVING GREEN SNAKES THAT COIL ROUND FAIR ARMS.

"Here is something new in the way of ornamentation," a salesman in a large uptown New York jewelry store said, opening a box. Out walked a monster beetle, fully four inches in length. About its body was a solid gold band, locked by a tiny padlock, to which was attached a costly gold chain, about two inches in length, fastened to a pin. The beetle's back glistened in the light, having been treated to a dress of gold, and as it lumbered along its long legs forked together in a curious fashion. "It's a shawl pin. You see the pin is used to fasten lace or a shawl, or perhaps worn on the bonnet, the insect crawling around the length of the chain. They are perfectly harmless and not expensive, as they live on air—that is, they have never been seen to eat. This one was brought here to mount, which is a very fine operation, as the legs and antennæ are all so delicate. After all, there is nothing objectionable about them, except the idea of having them crawl over you. They all come from South America, and the only lot in the city is to be taken to France, where the owner will try to introduce the fashion of wearing them." They cost from $10 to $50, depending entirely on the amount of the ring. There is nothing cruel about it, as they are bound loosely, and the gold has no effect upon their sides.

In Brazil the fashion of wearing beetles is carried to a great extent. A well known resident has a beetle with a collar of gold which meets at the top, and is there ornamented with a diamond of great value. The insect has a cage, surrounded by the plants among which it lives in its native state, and nothing is neglected to make it as comfortable as possible. But the most popular insect used for an ornament in Brazil is a small phosphorescent beetle. These are often worn fastened in the hair, and as the two phosphorescent or life giving spots are on the side of the head, the black insect is, of course, invisible, especially when in the raven locks of the fair Brazilians. Twenty or thirty of these beetles will throw out a light sufficient to read by, or grouped over the forehead and held in place, the effect is beautiful.

Several years ago a New York lady gave a masquerade ball at her summer house in Newport. The dancing was on the lawn, and the guests were requested to be there half an hour before dark. The hostess wore the costume of the night, and in the daylight her black dress, covered with ivy leaves, did not attract special attention, but when she appeared in the gay throng after night she presented a perfect blaze of light, and was the centre of the admiring and wondering company. Tremulous waves of reddish yellow flame seemed to move over her entire dress, while in a cap on her head gleamed one great fiery star. The cause of this illumination was the phosphorescent light of more than 5,000 fireflies. For weeks previous to the ball the designer of the costume had been storing away fireflies, and on the day of the fete they were rapidly put on the dress. As the light-giving spot is on the ventral surface, each one was placed on its back and held down by a fine silver wire, so skilfully caught that it could not turn over or escape, and was not injured. The star was formed by many beetles.

In Jamaica a large beetle, the lampyris, is used by ladies. Some of the phosphorescent beetles used by them give out lights that have to be seen to be appreciated, and more than twenty different kinds are used, representing as many different degrees of light, shade, tint, etc. One, the pygolampis, has a rich orange color, changing to yellow, flickering in intermittent flashes of light; another, called photuris, is curious for the gradual increase of light it shows; commencing with a faint reddish hue, it rapidly grows into brilliancy, finally blazing like a torch, a rich green light, and then dying away to reappear again.

Snakes have been used as ornaments, the small, inoffensive green snakes being the most popular, on account of their beauty and harmless nature. They cling around the arm with all the tenacity of their golden, bejeweled imitators that are now so fashionable. Animals, or parts of them, although naturally the adjuncts of barbaric splendor, are greatly used in the make up of fashionable toilets of the present day. Some of the handsomest sleeve buttons and studs are made of polished flesh skin—sharks or dog fish being preferred, as they take a fine polish, and closely resemble the fossil coral favorites, that are also used, and when highly polished, the delicate cells that were once the home of the coral polyp are distinctly visible, and as a whole resemble honeycomb.

An expensive costume was a cape made of an extremely rare humming bird. The whole

The Democrats of Columbia county declined to make Mr. Herring Register and Recorder until he had served in the ranks for a while and given evidence that his conversion was genuine and not professed solely to get an office.

The Democratic State Central Committee met in Harrisburg on Wednesday last, and decided to hold the next State Convention in Williamsport on the 28th of September next. There had been a vigorous effort made by the Williamsporters to secure the Convention and it proved successful.

The New York Herald has published an article signed by Charles Barrett, claiming that the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad is fast increasing its indebtedness. The article claims that the dividends paid by the company were far in excess of the net earnings and also that the company publishes its statements in such a manner as to be incomprehensible.

The President had another return of fever on Saturday, caused by an interruption in the flow of pus. On Monday another surgical operation was performed. The President was placed under the influence of ether and an incision made into the track of the ball below the twelfth rib. This afforded relief and the President speedily improved. At last reports he continued to grow better.

The Republicans and negroes combined in North Carolina and defeated the prohibition ticket by some 90,000 majority. Wonder what great moral sentiment that coalition represents, and of what turpitude the Democrats can be accused for fighting against whisky. No doubt the lying leaders will assert that the Democratic vote for temperance is a blow struck at the liberties of the people.

One P. W. Crowe of Peoria, Ills. states that he is the manufacturer of the infernal machines recently shipped to England. More of them, he says, are making in Peoria, and believing himself not liable to prosecution will continue the work until England does justice to Ireland. This Crowe should be plucked without loss of time and put where he can learn an honest trade. It is about time that the Government repudiates all sympathy with such murderous plots.

The city solicitor of Williamsport has decided that the office of President Judge of Lycoming county is taxable for city purposes. He holds, however, that it should be taxed as an "office" and not as an "occupation." Williamsport needs taxes pretty badly no doubt, but the presiding judge might as well be exempted from payment of them Judges do not receive any too much pay for their services, and what money they get, ought to be allowed to remain in their possession.

It will be the extremity of disgrace to the people of this State if J. D. Cameron is re-elected to the Senate in 1884 by the work of a few politicians. Were his election put to a popular test he would be defeated so overwhelmingly that he would never lift his head in politics again. But it is no part of the Cameron policy to risk a popular vote. Their office in this world is to defeat the popular wish, and that they may do it next year and in 1884 they are employing the old tactics now.—Pittsburg Dispatch, Rep.

The New York Times publishes a severe charge of official inefficience and extravagance made by the present commissioner of agriculture against his predecessor. It claims that the experiments for raising tea in South Carolina, for manufacturing sorghum sugar, and for reclaiming arid lands in the west by artesian wells, were all visionary and displayed an ignorance almost criminal. Large amounts of money have been expended without producing a single practicle result. The charges are very direct and seem to admit of no misconstruction or evasion.

The democratic judicial conference for the district composed of the counties of Bedford and Somerset, has nominated Hon. William J. Baer of Somerset for president judge to succeed Hon. William H. Hall. Bedford county presented Hon. J. M. Reynolds of that county as its choice for the nomination, but Mr. Reynolds withdrew his name and Mr. Baer was unanimously nominated. The district is strongly republican in politics, but the people of these mountain counties do not regard the office of judge as a political one. Mr. Baer is personally very popular and is regarded as an excellent lawyer. John Cessna is the Republican candidate and deserves to be beaten.

An extraordinary scene was witnessed in the lobby of the English House of Commons on Wednesday of last week. Mr. Bradlaugh, the atheistic member, who had been expelled for refusing to take the oath of office, made a vigorous attempt to force his way in and take his seat. He was resisted by the police and after a fierce struggle, was ejected. A large crowd assembled and cheered Bradlaugh lustily. The agitator made a serious mistake in the endeavor to obtain entrance by violence. Whatever may be his claims, he has certainly not strengthened them by his conduct, and he will doubtless lose the support of some of the Liberal members. The probabilities are, that Bradlaugh will eventually be accorded his seat, but not if he persists in squabbles with the police.

For pure, unadulterated impudence of the most exasperating quality, commend us to Republican organs like the New York Tribune. That journal of disamulation and fraud denominaltes the Democratic candidate for Governor of Ohio, as "Mr. Pocketbookwalter," passing over with airy indifference the well known fact that the Republican candidate for the same office, "Calico Charley" Foster, has not now and never has had any claim upon his party except a good bank account. A tricky politician, a deceitful political friend and a thorough paced partisan of a not lofty stripe, he stands as a sample of what can be accomplished in the Republican party by unscrupulousness and a free use of money. Such politicians, and such papers as the Tribune, will one of these days finish the Republican party for ever.

The Philadelphia Press has declared uncompromising war against the corruptionists at Harrisburg. It says: "We admit that it is no revelation to say that for years unclean birds of prey have made their nest in Harrisburg. The disgrace is already old enough. The Press proposes a new departure which shall wipe out the infamous system of fraud and introduce new methods having honesty for their groundwork." It now remains to be seen whether the Press has strength enough to do what it promises. Just as ardent reformers have started out before this and wandered off the road into hopeless political quagmires. Perhaps the Press will have better luck, but vigorous denunciation—and nothing more—doesn't disturb public plunderers except for the moment, and by no means ends their infamous work.

The Commissioners of Lycoming county, who were accused by Harvey S. Wells of official corruption and peculation, have published a card denying their guilt in general terms, and asking their constituents for support at the coming convention. To this Mr. Wells replies in a card, stating that if the tax payers who have been defrauded will assist in defraying the expenses of a law suit he "will have all three of the commissioners arrested before night, charge them with stealing the public money, prove it on them and have them convicted in the Court and punished as provided by law for such crimes as they have committed."

There is no mistaking that language, and the offer should be accepted at once by some of the tax-payers. The charges are too serious to be passed over without investigation, and a trial should be had without delay. The Commissioners, if innocent, should be so declared, and if guilty should be punished.

In an editorial on the recent Democratic County Convention, the Republican discourses very gravely on the gagging of Democrats of Columbia county in their conventions, and states that "free speech, free thought and freedom are entirely stamped out." That is very funny, but for side-splitting humor does not equal the following: "This may do for Democrats, but Republicans, inured to independent thought, could never be muzzled by tyrannical rules instituted by 'bosses' their own purpose." This noble sentiment must have been intended for reading outside of the county. Here, where the machine business of the Republican party is so well known, the statement is ludicrous. The best refutation of the claim is to be found in the men who are now and have been for years dictators in the Republican party and who themselves are kept in office by a most aggravated form of "boss" in Harrisburg. Republican freedom in Columbia county is a burlesque—not a member of the party dare kick against the rule of the little ring in Bloomsburg—and the conventions are such cut-and-dried forms that even Republicans will not take the trouble to attend them.

DEATH OF GEN. PATTERSON.

General Robert Patterson, one of the most prominent citizens of the State; died at his residence in Philadelphia last Sunday night, aged 89 years. For more than fifty years he had been associated with the best business and social circles of Philadelphia and was deservedly honored and respected. He served in the war of 1812, and rose to the rank of captain. In 1828 he became Major General of the First Division of Pennsylvania Volunteers and held the office for more than fifty years. He fought in the Mexican war and distinguished himself especially at the battle of Cerro Gordo. General Patterson was in active service during a part of the late war and only retired when his term of appointment expired. As a business man he was eminently successful, and at the time of his death was the owner of four large cotton mills. His death is very generally lamented and his long and useful life has ended, crowned with riches and honors.

HANGED AT LAST.

Nathan Orlando Greenfield was executed at Syracuse on Friday last for the murder of his wife Alice, at Orwell, Oswego county, October 21, 1875. The case was remarkable for its stubborn contests in the courts. There were three trials, the jury once disagreeing and twice finding a verdict of guilty; two death sentences and five stays of proceedings and reprieves. He paid the penalty of his crime five years and nine months after it was committed. Greenfield protested his innocence to the last, and, in response to a suggestion that he would make a confession, said that he would have done so long ago if he had been guilty. He claimed that two brothers, Royal and Alden Kellogg, and one George Hines, all men of bad reputation had murdered his wife. The evidence against them was very strong, but for some reason they were never brought to trial. There are many people who yet believe that Greenfield was innocent, though his reputation was far from good. The case will take its place among the most celebrated on the criminal list in this country.

DISGUSTING AND DISGRACEFUL.

A despatch from Pittsburg states that small pox and typhoid fever are very prevalent there. It is feared that this winter the former will become epidemic. A horrible stench arises from the grave yard there used by the colored people. This is due to the interment of bodies one on the top of another, in some instances the bodies filling the grave to within six inches of the top. During the night twenty or thirty dogs prowl through the ground, and the sexton is frequently obliged to cover the bodies which they have laid bare. What kind of city authorities are there in Pittsburg, that such a shocking condition of affairs is permitted to exist? Surely there must be some law by which the people can reach their shamefully inefficient servants and compel them to adopt such measures as will protect the public. It is a disgrace to Pittsburg and its citizens that such a despatch should be published, and the sooner steps are taken to remedy the evil, the better will it be for the interests of the city. As it is now, Pittsburg is a pest house and should be treated accordingly.

OUR CANDIDATES.

The gentlemen nominated at the County Convention last Tuesday, are all reputable citizens, consistent and reliable Democrats, and deserve the solid support of the party. Only three of the number were re-elected—F. L. Shuman for Associate Judge, William Krickbaum for Prothonotary and Charles Reichart for County Commissioner. The others are men of intelligence and capability, who will administer the affairs of their respective offices with satisfaction to the people and credit to themselves. The Democratic majority is steadily increasing in the county and the ticket this year should receive the vote of every Democrat, in order that the full party strength may be shown. After every convention there is sure to follow some feeling of disappointment on the part of defeated candidates and their friends, but this should never be permitted to affect the vote in the Fall. We do not believe that there will be any opposition to the nominees at the coming election, but that, on the contrary, all will be chosen by triumphant majorities. Apathy is a more dangerous foe to success than disaffection, and all good Democrats should deem it a duty not only to vote but to see that their neighbors do likewise.

Why American Goods are Preferred.

The growing reputation of American manufacturers in the markets of the world has alarmed competitors abroad. Whatever Americans undertake, whether it be machine tools, cutlery, silks, flour, cotton cloth, or any other merchandise, they make their brands the leading ones, selling for the most money, and universally sought after. The reasons for this are plain. It is not on account of the better and more direct processes employed; it is not by discarding workshop traditions and old-time methods; it is not by such adventitious aids that we have achieved so great an eminence that our trade marks are counterfeited and foreign goods are represented as of American make. It is because our manufacturers have found that merchantile honesty is the only policy, and that when they attempt to adulterate or lower the standard the criticism of competitors exposes them at once.

American machine tools of first-class makers are not cut in weight or in workmanship. It is a race to see who shall discover a weak part that can be made stronger, or a detail exposed to wear that can be made more durable. The same is true of cotton goods and silks. The senseless weighting of both with adulterants of one kind or another is not practiced here, for experienced teaches our people that the best is the cheapest. —Mechanical Engineer.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S COMMISSION.

Under the above caption the Patriot of the 5th inst. has an extended editorial, in which it claimed that the Act of April 7th 1870, under which the attorney general's, since that date have drawn commissions amounting to $7,000 per annum, is unconstitutional and void. The title of this act is as follows: "An Act to enlarge the jurisdiction of the court of common pleas of the county of Dauphin in cases wherein the commonwealth may be plaintiff, and to provide for the issuing of writs of foreign attachment in such cases." The first section which nominally provides for the extension of the jurisdiction of the Dauphin county court, does not do so in reality, as the court already had full powers in the premises. The second section purports to give the attorney general power to collect debts due the Commonwealth, but he was fully empowered so to do by the Act of April 21, 1857. The third section provides that for certain unpaid claims due the State there shall be paid by the debtor or debtors "a commission of "five per cent. to the counsel or attorney "of the commonwealth, which shall be "charged in addition to any interest or "penalty payable under existing laws; "provided that no greater amount than "seven thousand dollars be paid for pro-"fessional services during any one year "and that any surplus shall be paid into "the state treasury." There is nothing in the title of the Act to indicate the presence of such a provision, important as it is. This is in direct conflict with the Constitution, which expressly provides that "No bill shall be passed by the legislature containing more than one subject, which shall be clearly expressed in the title, except appropriation bills."

The language is plain and cannot be misconstrued. It is equally plain that the bill does contain more than one subject not clearly expressed in the title. It follows, that the Act is unconstitutional and, as a matter of course, that the sum of $7000 drawn annually from the treasury by different attorney generals during the past eleven years, was not lawfully drawn and ought to be returned. The people are in the humor for retrenchment just now, and would be as well pleased to recover $77,000 taken unlawfully by attorney generals as they were to save the expenditure of $125,000 to legislators who were not entitled thereto. It may be well for Mr. Wolfe, or some other member of the legislature, to request the attendance of Attorney General Palmer in court, to have this little matter judicially determined.

New Laws.

The following laws were enacted by the late legislature, and will be found of general interest:

To enable city, county, township and borough tax collectors to collect taxes for the payment of which they have become personally liable without having collected the same, but by expiration of the authority of their respective warrants, and to extend the time for collection of the same for a period of one year from the passage of this act.

That in all cases in which the period of two years, the limitation of the warrants in the duplicate of county, city, township, ward and borough tax collectors have expired, and said collector or collectors have become liable for the amount of tax on said duplicates without having collected the same, the said duplicates and warrants in all such cases are hereby revived and extended for another period of one year from the passage of this act, and said collector or collectors are hereby authorized and employed to proceed and collect said taxes from all persons who have not paid taxes assessed to them residing in said districts within which it may have been assessed, as well as from all persons who removed from said city, ward, township or townships or boroughs and have neglected to pay taxes so as aforesaid assessed with like effect as if said warrants had not expired by the limitation of two years, aforesaid: Provided, that provisions of this act shall not apply to warrants issued prior to the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four: And provided further, that the provisions of this act shall not apply to cities of the first and second class. Approved the tenth day of June A. D., 1881.

HENRY M. HOYT.

To authorize the several boards of school directors of this commonwealth, except in cities of the first, second and third class, to refund any indebtedness of their respective school districts at a lower rate of interest, and declaring bonds or certificates hetetofore issued for such purpose valid.

Section 1—That the school directors of the several school districts in this commonwealth, except in cities of the first, second and third class, be and they are hereby authorized to issue bonds, with or without coupons attached, to redeem the present indebtedness of the respective districts where the indebtedness is due or payable at the option of said boards at a lower rate of interest, redeemable at the option of said school directors, at any time after two years from date thereof, interest payable semi-annually, which bonds shall be exempt from all taxes except for state purposes, and shall not be sold at less than par by said school boards.

Section 2—That all bonds, notes or certificates of indebtedness heretofore issued by any board of school directors in the district aforesaid to fund floating debt or refund a funded debt at a lower rate of interest, be and the same are hereby declared to be valid and binding as fully and effectually as though they had been specially authorized by statute: provided, however, that this act shall not affect any cases that may now be pending in any of the courts of this commonwealth. Approved May 26th, 1881.

HENRY. M. HOYT.

Though there was considerable feeling among the friends of the different candidates at the convention on Tuesday, the best of humor prevailed and order was preserved during the session. The greatest interest was taken in the struggle for the office of Register and Recorder.

SPEAKING "BY THE CARD."

C. H. Wood, Esq., of the C. & T. Ry., Port Huron, Mich., favors our correspondent with the following: After suffering for nearly a year with rheumatism, receiving treatment from most of the best physicians of Michigan and the West, I happened to try a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil. Upon the first application I used fully half a bottle, and its effect was almost instantaneous. I immediately dropped all other treatment, and confined myself to its use alone. After the use of three bottles, instead of being driven to my business, or moving about on crutches, I walked from one to three miles daily about business, and have been free from this horrible disease for over a year, not having the slightest twinge of it. Hence, I say that all medicines known to me are useless when compared with the Old German Remedy. Use this statement when and where it suits.

STATEMENT UNDER OATH.

A Startling Revelation of Suffering!

"Oh, My God, How I Did Suffer."

"I Earnestly Prayed to Die."

"I have been afflicted for twenty years with an obstinate skin disease, called by some M. D.'s Psoriasis, and others Lepr osy, commencing on my scalp and, in spite of all I could do, with the help of the most skilful doctors, it slowly but surely extended until a year ago this winter it covered my entire person in form of dry scales. For the last three years I have been unable to do any labor, and suffering intensely all the time. Every morning there could be nearly a dustpanful of scales taken from the sheet of my bed, some half as large as the envelope containing this letter. In the latter part of winter my skin commenced cracking open. I tried everything, almost that could be thought of without any relief. The 19th of June I started west in hopes I could reach the Hot Springs. I reached Detroit, and was so low I thought I should have to go to the hospital, but finally got as far as Lansing, Mich., where I had a Sister living. One Dr. —— treated me about two weeks, but did me no good. All thought I had but a short time to live. I earnestly prayed to die. Cracked through the skin all over my back, across my ribs, arms, hands, limbs, feet badly swollen, toe-nails came off, finger nails dead and hard as bone, hair dead, dry, and lifeless as straw. O, my God! how I did suffer.

"My sister, Mrs. E. H. Davis, had a small part of a box of Cuticura in the house. She wouldn't give up; said 'We will try Cuticura.' Some was applied on one hand and arm. Eureka! there was relief; stopped the terrible burning sensation from the word go. They immediately got the resolvent Cuticura and Soap. I commenced by taking one tablespoonful of Resolvent three times a day, after meals; had a bath once a day, water about blood heat, used Cuticura Soap freely; applied Cuticura morning and evening. Result, returned to my home in just six weeks from time I left and my skin as smooth as this sheet of paper.

A band of strolling players made merry music on the streets last Monday evening with violins and harp. After hearing such "concord of sweet sounds," the organ grinder becomes an object of increased aversion.

Notwithstanding the lateness of his announcement, Cyrus B. McHenry made a good run as candidate for Associate Judge. We are informed that there are five townships in the county which he did not have time to visit.

Mr. Philip Appleman of Fishingcreek township, has shown us a stalk of oats which measures six feet, two and a half inches in length. The head contained no less than 150 grains. This is the largest stalk we have ever seen, and we do not believe it will be equalled this season.

A single scull race, distance one mile and a quarter, for $100 a side, took place on the river at Wilkes-Barre on Saturday last. The contestants were Tim Lenahan, of New York, and E. S. Chase, of Wilkes-Barre, and the race was won by the latter.

A young man named J. Adams, who carried the mail from Nanticoke to points along Harvey's Creek, was drowned whilst bathing in the canal on Saturday afternoon last. He was taken with cramps and sank before he could be rescued.

We have received the catalogue of Lewistown Academy for 1880-1881. This flourishing institution is under the able management of Prof. W. Henry Schuyler, son of our townsman Dr. Schuyler. There are 134 names of scholars upon the rolls. The next term begins August 31st and continues until December 20th.

The "fly dispellers," or whatever their name may be, which Mr. Tubbs has placed on the dining room tables at the Exchange Hotel, do their work admirably and the guests are not annoyed by the buzzing pests. Flies are nuisances of the most exasperating kind, and their banishment is a boon to be appreciated.

Have you seen the new comet? If not, get up just before sunrise and look at visitor You can see it by finding the star Alpha Aurigæ, then to the left and below this, the star Beta Auriga and in a line with the two is the new comet. Any of your friends can point out the stars named—if they know where the blessed twinklers are.

James Van Horn died of small pox, on Friday night last, at about eleven o'clock, and was buried the same night. He was very low on the preceding Sunday, but rallied to such a degree that the physician in attendance entertained hopes of his recovery. On Thursday he grew worse and sank steadily until he died. This is the third death from the disease.

The Catholic Cemetery at Wilkes-Barre was recently found to be in a most disgraceful condition. The graves were very shallow and in some places the ends of the coffins protruded from the ground. Streams of putrid matter oozed from the decaying bodies and poisoned the air. Prompt measures were taken to remedy the evils and no careless burials will take place in the Cemetery hereafter. The city is badly in need of a system of drainage.

James McGinnis, who was committed to Bloomsburg jail two weeks ago, charged with incendiarism in attempting to set fire to North Ashland colliery, was on Monday admitted to bail in the sum of $1000. Patrick Dougherty, of Homesville, and John Crane, of Conyngham township, are his boundsmen. Bail was entered before Squire Flanigan, of Centralia.—Ashland Advocate.

Vennor says that we may expect a great change about the time the new comet is in its perihelion, when it will be also nearest the earth. This will occur on the 20th of the present month. During the time from the 15th to the 20th instead of being burned up, as we might expect, he says we shall nearly be frozen by frosts and strong cold northerly winds. If he does hit it any better than he did for the first two weeks of the month, there is not much cause for alarm.

Samuel Miller was arrested and lodged in jail at Williamsport on Saturday, charged with the murder of his father, Joseph Miller, of Clinton township. The latter, who was 74 years of age, was insured for $40,000, of which the son held $2,000. Suspicion was aroused, and a post-mortem examination revealed the presence of poison. The coroner's jury rendered a verdict that the poison had been administered by Samuel Miller. The crime is so revolting that the trial of the accused will create great excitement. It is claimed for the prisoner that he has borne a good character, and there seems to be a strong belief that he is innocent.

The trustees of the Pennsylvania State College in Centre county have established fifty free scholarships in the College—one for each Senatorial district. Any boy 15 years or over can be a candidate for the scholarship of the district in which he lives. There will be a competitive examination, but a Senator will have the privilege of selecting any one of the candidates who is qualified. Applicants will be examined in the common English branches, physical geography, higher algebra as far as quadratics, four books of geometry and United States History. The scholarships will entitle the holder to four years free tuition, and will free them from the other college charges, such as room rent fuel, etc.

We understand it is the intention to put the big saw mill at this place, which has been idle for some years, in operation, as soon as repairs which are now being made, can be completed. A Williamsport firm, it is said, will operate it and saw 1,000,000 feet of logs this season. The mill is well located, the point is a good one for the lumber trade, and we cannot see why the mill, if properly managed, should not do a profitable business.—Sunbury Gazette.

A festival will be held on the afternoon and evening of August 20th in Thomas McHenry's grove, two miles northwest of Orangeville. Supper will be served from five o'clock until the close of the festivities and ice cream and other refreshments can be obtained at any time. Good music will be furnished. The proceeds will be applied to building the church at the McHenry appointment. All are cordially invited.

There are no new cases of small pox to report, and the disease may be considered as having finished its course. Mr. Zimmerman has recovered and no longer needs medical attendance. There is a possibility that his wife and three children may have the disease in a modified form, as they have been in the house with him. They have been vaccinated. There is no longer any danger to be apprehended. Should the Zimmerman family be attacked, they will be totally isolated, and their residence on Railroad street is a long distance from the centre of town.

Mr. Elisha Bidleman met with a serious accident on Tuesday last. He boarded the twelve o'clock train at the station, intending to get off at the East street crossing, and in so doing, missed his footing and was thrown under the wheels. His right leg was broken in three places below the knee, his body badly cut and bruised and one of his hands injured. Dr. Gardner set the broken bones, and rendered such other assistance as was necessary. Mr. Bidleman has quite a period of enforced idleness before him, as it will be long before he will be able to leave the house.

Nathan Creasy died at his home in Catawissa township, on Sunday morning last, aged fifty years and six months. He had been sick about two weeks, having been prostrated whilst canvassing the county as a candidate for Treasurer. Mr. Creasy was well and favorably known in the community and had many warm friends who will keenly regret his death. He bore an enviable reputation as an honest and upright man, a good citizen and a loyal friend. The funeral took place on Tuesday and the remains were interred in the Reformed Lutheran Cemetery, Catawissa.

Last week, Messrs. Colton, Ulrich and other engineers of the North and West Branch Railway Company, were in Wilkes-Barre, running the lines for the new road. At South Wilkes-Barre, connection was made with the Central R. R. of New Jersey and from that point a line was run, following the canal, to Market street in the city. It is stated that the road will connect with the Reading R. R. at Catawissa. The work will be pushed rapidly to completion, and the whistle of the locomotive and the rumble of the cars are sounds that will soon be heard along the South side of the Susquehanna.

It was rumored a few days ago that one of of Mr. William Hulme's family was sick with small pox. Mr. Hulme owns a fine farm near Benton, and his house stands near the main road. A red flag was displayed one morning and this was thought to indicate the presence of the disease. It turns out, however, that the sanguinary emblem was flung to the breeze, not to announce small pox, but to notify the stage driver that a package awaited transportation to Bloomsburg. Of course there was no disease in the house. It does seem as if the average citizen loses his head whenever small pox is mentioned, and "straightway forgetteth what manner of man he was," as regards common sense.

There has been too much disorder in Bloomsburg of late, and the fair fame of the town has suffered in consequence. No serious breaches of the peace have occurred, but there has been boisterous and unseemly behavior, and that loud and profane talk which springs from overindulgence in intoxicating liquors. This is all wrong, and should be stopped at once. Our town has a reputation for good order second to none in the State, and it must be maintained at all hazards. Noisy and quarrelsome revellers should be driven from the streets, all profane and vulgar language checked, and scuffling or any indecorous actions promptly stopped. Such things would not be permitted in any of the larger towns or cities, and is no reason why they should be tolerated here. The good name of the town is worth money to every property owner within limits.

CATAWISSA LICENSES AGAIN.

EDITOR OF THE COLUMBIAN: I clipped the following from your paper a few weeks ago, a comment on a quotation from the Journal.

"If the warning now given does not produce proper reform so that the law shall be observed, we will not only revoke the licenses, but grant no others."

"Now, let the Journal name its informant. Whoever that zealous temperance advocate may be, we guarantee that he is not willing to have his name published, and that he is unable to go into court and swear to a single fact. While there are very many people who are always ready to find fault with those who are entrusted with the execution of the laws, it is noticeable that these same persons are never ready to assist in the enforcement of law, by coming into court to tell what they know. They are moral cowards. Catawissa can now get rid of its saloons if it can show that the statement of the Journal is true to the slightest extent."

I am not the informant of the Journal, nor am I one who would be likely to see the greatest evils in the place. But lest I should be classed among the "moral cowards," I will say that I have seen more drunkenness in Catawissa about the saloons, since the license cases, than I saw before the protest was before court against license. The encouragement given to the complainants against liquor, by the Court, does not inspire me to go into court on the liquor question But I am ready and willing at any time, to be called into court, to testify to the above facts.

GEO. B. DECHANT,
Pastor of the Reformed Church at Catawissa.
Catawissa, August 6th, 1881.

The kind of testimony which Mr. Dechant offers to give, proves nothing because of its generality. It would not even prove that there is more drunkenness now than before the protest, but simply that he has seen more, because his attention has been particularly directed to it. It is not evidence that the liquor came from Catawissa. If the facts are as stated, the remedy is a very simple one. Personal reflection upon the Court is not the manner prescribed by the Legislature for punishing violations of the liquor laws. We are informed that there has been more drunkenness in Berwick since the Court refused to grant any license there, than there was when all the hotels and several saloons were in full blast. If the Court is responsible for an increase of drunkenness in Catawissa, then it is responsible for the same state of things in Berwick. We are surprised that men of intelligence should be so illogical and unreasonable.

ROHRSBURG RUMORS

Our town is often visited by the Indians who are spending their vacation with farmers in Greenwood.

Our popular undertaker, S. Burninger, and his wife have sustained a severe affliction in the death of their little daughter, an only child, Mary Janetta, aged about eighteen months.

Benjamin Redline buried a little son last Saturday and another lies in a very critical condition.

An infant son of L. J. and Ettie Black died on Saturday evening, aged seven weeks.

Dysentery is raging here now at a fearful rate. There are ten or eleven cases at the present time, mostly children; but there are a few of those advanced in life.

C. S. Long's wife and daughter are here, visiting his mother.

APPEARANCE OF THE ARMY WORM.

Prompted by reading an account of the terrible ravages of the army worm in a western paper, Mr. Robert Miexell, of Huntington township, proceeded to his corn field to see if the pests had made their appearance in the East. To his surprise he found them in great numbers, secreted in the tops of the ears. They resemble the cut worm in everything but color and are of different sizes. The color depends somewhat upon the age or size of the worm. They begin their destructive operations at the end of the ear farthest from the stalk and work downward until, in some instances, nothing remains except the stump of the stalk. This discovery by Mr. Miexell has been the subject of earnest discussion in that neighborhood and it is feared if the worms keep on in their devastation, the corn crop will be a total failure.—Mountain Echo.

A CARD OF THANKS.

To the Democracy of Columbia County:

I deem it meet at this time, in consideration of the evident appreciation of my services and worth by the Democracy, to render thanks to the party for its generous support both in the past and at the late delegate election. Although not nominated, yet it is a source of the greatest gratification and pleasure for me to note that my friends still retain a warm and kindly feeling for me, as evinced by the handsome vote received in the convention. I feel confident that I discharged the duties of Register and Recorder faithfully and consistently, and sincerely trust with satisfaction to the people of the county. Again, I return thanks to the Democracy for past and present political favors.

ROUND ABOUT ROARINGCREEK.

Picnics are in full blast hereabouts.

Miss Manly, of Ashland, is visiting relatives near here.

Miss Harriet Hower was visiting relatives at Hazleton and Freeland recently.

Three ladies at the Esther Furnace picnic on Saturday, either fainted or had convulsions.

Since last Saturday evening we have been having some very fine showers, which gives the corn as well as other things a better appearance.

Remember the picnics; one at this place August 20th, also the same day at Mill Grove; the Kernsville band festival the 27th, and the Free Will September 3rd.

We had the pleasure of taking by the hand, our friend H. V. White, a law student in the office of Messrs. Freeze & Eyerly, of Bloomsburg. Mr. White appeared to be as jovial as ever.

Mr. D. F. Brandt, of New Jersey, and Samuel Snyder, Esq., of Mifflinville, were calling on friends and relatives in this place and Catawissa township. Come again, gentlemen, but next time bring your ladies with you and stop longer.

Joseph Carl, a farmer near here, we are informed, almost fell down in the field while binding oats last Saturday. It was either a sun stroke or a slight stroke of palsy.

While having an axe in one hand, last Thursday, Mr. J. S. Scott asked D. S. Helwig for an apple, whereupon he threw Mr. Scott one and by some mishap in catching it, he cut an ugly gash in the palm of one his hands.

Main's International Show exhibited here on Wednesday, afternoon and evening. The tent was not very capacious, but it was absolutely packed with men, women and children—a number of babies in arms being bewildered spectators. The show is not a circus, as might be imagined because the performance is given under canvas, but a variety entertainment with athletic feats interspersed. A man with an iron jaw performed some marvelous acts, lifting chairs and a barrel with his teeth, and finally lifting the barrel with two well-grown boys perched on its top. There were two clowns one of whom cracked some of the most venerable jokes we have ever heard. The tumbling was passable, trapeze performance good, eccentricities about up to the average. There was also an excellent contortionist. The Show is fully worth the price of admission and is much better than was to have been expected.

This is the time of year when the deciduous banana peel is a trap for the feet of the unwary, and it serves as an index to the characters of the passers-by. The inconsiderate throw it down; the incautious trample upon it; the selfish pass it by, and the humanely thoughtful remove it to a place where it will do the least harm.

A PICNIC WITH VARIATIONS.

Accidents, discomforts and annoyances of divers sorts seem to be inseparable from that variety of out-door entertainment known as a picnic. Showers fall, lunches are spoiled, wagons break down, and mishaps of more or less moment befall the pleasure seekers. These mischances, as a rule, pertain to picnics in daylight and are varied to some extent when the time is changed. One afternoon last week, a party of young people left Bloomsburg to enjoy themselves in a grove not many miles from Orangeville, intending to partake of supper and then return in the glory of a full orbed moon. The plan was original and would have been delightful had it not been for the "unexpected," which we are told "always happens." The party did not arrive at the place of their destination until the sun had set, and the twilight faded into night with such amazing rapidity, that the evening meal was eaten in a darkness which would have been Cimmerian, had not the gentlemen kindled huge bonfires to dispel the gloom. The moon did not shine forth resplendent, on the contrary she retired behind murky banks of clouds and illumined the scene not a whit. The darkness increased and a few rain drops pattered upon the leaves. This was the signal for a hasty departure and the big wagon was soon on its way to Orangeville. A halt was made at the hotel in that town, and for an hour and a half there was patient waiting for the storm that came not. This was not highly enlivening and at last patience ceased to be a virtue, and the revellers started for home. Not a great distance had been traversed when a lurching of the wagon, followed by a full stop to progress, evidenced a crisis. Matches were lighted, and it was ascertained that one of the hind wheels was hanging over a yawning chasm, and that a friendly tree alone prevented the tumble of the vehicle and its occupants down a miniature precipice. This danger passed, another effort to reach home was made, but once more the wheels left the highway and sought refuge in a ditch. A house stood near by and to the occupant an appeal was made for a lantern. The illuminator was procured, and the gentlemen of the party took turns in carrying this head light in front of the equipage until they reached Bloomsburg, at the cheery hour of four o'clock in the morning—weary, foot-sore and forlorn. Persons proposing picnics hereafter this season, will not be likely to gain many recruits from the ranks of this lantern brigade To them the beauties of moonlight picnics are but as phantoms of a disordered imagination, as unsubstantial as the "baseless fabric of a vision."

After an obscuration of three weeks or so, the daily Sun shone feebly on Friday last and then sank out of sight once more. There were a couple of incoherent, irrelevant and badly written communications in the issue, one of which reflected strongly on the political vagaries of C. B. Brockway in 1868 and 1872, at which times he was connected with the COLUMBIAN. As we had nothing whatever to do with the paper in the years mentioned, we have nothing to say concerning the strictures upon Mr. Brockway's course.

He has also heard from many who have used it for rheumatism, that it alone of all remedies did them good.

A DANGEROUS COUNTERFEIT.

There is a dangerous counterfeit in circulation, purporting to be "Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer." The strongest evidence of the great value of "Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer" is the fact that parties knowing its efficacy try to imitate it. Each bottle of the genuine has a "fac simile" of the signature of "D. R. Becker"—the manufacturer—blown in the glass; and the "Restorer" is as clear and harmless as water, while it preserves all the component properties necessary to restore life, vigor, growth, and color to the hair. Purchase only from responsible parties. Each bottle warranted. C. N. Crittenton, New York City, Wholesale Agent. oct. 29, 80-tf are undoubtedly the cheapest and most durable fence made, is not effected by fire, wind or flood, does not cause snow drifts, takes fewer posts and stock cannot push it down. Our wire is four pointed, is made of two strands of number 12 best galvanized steel wire twisted together just enough to allow for contraction and expansion in Summer and Winter, barbs are fastened every seven inches. The use of barbed wire is no longer an experiment, as last year over one hundred thousand miles were put up. We believe our wire to be the best and cheapest now manufactured because it is made of the best steel wire and runs 15 feet to the pound having the greatest strength and visibility with the least weight of any made. Put up on spools of about 100 rods weighing about 100 pounds. Price per pound 11 cents by the spool, less quantities 11½ cents per pound.

BARBED WIRE FENCES

Advantages of Graded Animals.

A mongrel sire of any kind of stock should never be used. If a farmer is not able to purchase a thoroughbred alone he should get others to unite with him and make a joint purchase, dividing purchase price, and cost of keeping. When this is done no neighborhood need be without a sire. The choice should be according to the wants of the community. If cheesemaking is the leading dairy interest, then a breed of cattle should be selected which will furnish the largest yield of milk, and this selection should be governed by the circumstances of feed. In most dairy districts the Ayrshires will be found to be the best adapted to the purpose on account of their smaller size and their ability to take care of themselves, and to furnish the largest yield of milk on shorter feed. Where the pastures are luxuriant and feed is abundant, the Holsteins will give satisfaction. These are the most valuable cheese-producing cattle. We know of crosses of the Ayrshires upon the natives which have demonstrated their value. These grades made superior cows and one of them so wonderfully combined the flow and quality of milk that she would make eighteen pounds of butter a week. Where cows are kept for butter, a selection of either the Jersey or Guernsey cross should be made. Seventy years ago an Alderney bull produced a heifer calf, which was reared and all her female progeny saved. At this day the descendants are kept in the family of the original heifer, and are still noted as extra good cows, and the marks of the Alderney can be traced as well the superior merits. Nearly half a century has elapsed since Henry W. Delarow imported from England two cows and a bull, "Durham" cattle. These cows were good milkers, and recently I saw two cows descended from this importation which showed the old Durham type in great perfection, although several generations removed by crosses upon natives, and they were remarkably good cows. Another farmer began with a half-bred Jersey cow, and by saving and retaining all his heifers from Jersey bulls he has established a herd of graded Jerseys which produce more butter than any other dairy of like number, and twice the amount he used to obtain when all of his stocks were natives. Other farmers in the neighborhood have followed his example, and have secured thereby the same results. Grades are nearly, if not quite as valuable as pure breeds for use in the dairy. They possess the hardiness and strong constitutional qualities of the natives, which keep them free from disease and give them the ability to eat and assimilate almost anything and turn it to the best account. This is proven by the fact that in experiments in feeding to attain great weights, graded Short horns are usually selected. They combine the frames of the pure-breds and the strong stomachs of the natives.

Grade pigs are by far the most profitable for fattening on this account. They possess the fineness of bone and flesh and aptitude to fatten of thoroughbreds, and also the vigorous appetites and stamina of the natives. A thoroughbred sire will add, on this account alone, 25 per cent. to the value of the pigs on those got by a sire of mean or no blood. One South Down ram can double the mutton value of the progeny of more than one hundred merino sheep, and the offspring of these grades, if kept for breeders, may be made more desirable by another cross by a pure-bred sire. The income of the average dairy can be increased one-third by judicious crossing of the best native cows with pure-blood bulls. This statement resolves itself into a sort of mathematical problem by considering the average yield of the dairies of New York, for instance—which is about 1300 quarts—and that of a good Ayrshire herd—which will run up to 2500 quarts. Graded Ayrshires or Holsteins will add to the native side of this proportion from 300 to 500 quarts of milk, and grade Guernseys or Jerseys would add an equal proportion to the average yield of butter. It should be added that the butter of the grades is almost identical with that of the pure breds in color and quality.

RYE PASTURES.—The longer we live the more convinced we are of the value of early sown rye for winter and spring pasture. At such times stock will thrive and fatten on it with no other food, while cows giving milk will double the quantity and the butter be yellow and fragrant. Pigs, lambs, colts and calves skip and play and grow like weeds when turned upon it. Every one who pretends to farm should sow a patch of rye in the month of August, if for no other purpose than for such pasturage in spring. There is nothing equal to it; indeed, we think it almost indispensable to the growth and thrift of stock.

Although it is a common opinion that yellow corn contains more oil and is richer feed than white corn, it is not sustained by chemical analysis. Some very careful examinations were made for the New York State Agricultural Society some years ago, which showed that white corn contained considerably more oil than yellow corn. Probably, on the average of a hundred of bushels or more tests it might turn out that there is very little difference after all in respect of the color and quality of the grain and that it depends more upon the manner of growth, fertilizing and cultivation.

TRUTH AND HONOR.

Query:—What is the best family medicine in the world to regulate the bowels, purify the blood, remove costiveness and biliousness, aid digestion and tone up the whole system? Truth and honor compels us to answer, Hop Bitters; being pure, perfect and harmless. See another column.—Toledo Blade.

They have what they call winter oats in Oregon that are sown at times during the year—say from the last of September up to the middle of March, provided the ground is in favorable condition. These oats are used chiefly for milling, they yield larger grain, heavier and more uniform in size than summer or spring oats, and at the rate of from forty to eighty bushels per acre.

Never leave an excess of fruit to mature upon a tree under the impression that by so doing you can hope to increase the yield either in quantity or quality. An excessive crop is always secured at the expense of quality with loss of value, and not infrequently at the expense of the health and even ultimately of the life of the tree.

A DIFFICULT PROBLEM SOLVED.

Ambition, competition and over-exertion use up the vital powers of men and women, so that a desire for stimulants seems to be a natural human passion, and drunkenness prevails on account of this necessity for bodily and mental invigoration. Parker's Ginger Tonic fairly solves the difficult problem, and has brought health and happiness into many desolate homes. It does not tear down an already debilitated system, but builds it up without intoxicating.—Enquirer See other column.

Catching 185 Rats in his Hands.

The most extraordinary rat-killing match probably ever witnessed in this city occurred in the rear of the Eighth District police station on Friday night. There is a slaughter house adjoining it on the east. The rats had burrowed beneath the sidewalk from the slaughter house into the station and thence found their way into the building, defying the able-bodied tom cats and boldly invading the lodging room and nibbling the toes of the slumberers. The butcher whose establishment was the banqueting hall for the rodents, decided to dig up his pavement, fill up the rat-holes, and repave. When the lairs were uncovered and the subterranean passages, in numbers sufficiently labyrinthine to satisfy a dozen Sylvanus Cobbs, were opened up, a stream of rats poured forth. The butcher, with the quickness of a terrier, snatched rat after rat as they ran bewildered from the holes and dashed them against the brick wall. He continued this lightning work until he had killed 185 inside of an hour. He did not receive a wound while destroying the pests. Some of the policemen who witnessed the slaughter offered to match the slayer to kill rats at an exhibition.—Philadelphia Times.

A strange tale of cannibalism has been reported, with all apparent circumstantiality, from the interior of Viti Levu Fiji. The native teacher stationed at Na Drau, on being supplied with food by the townsfolk, was horrified to observe that a portion of it was human flesh. He at once exclaimed against the food, and refused to eat of it. Those who brought it to him admitted that it was human flesh, and said they had killed and cooked a government officer, and if he persisted in refusing to eat they would kill and cook him also. In terror of his life he ate a little, but took the first opportunity of escaping from his terrible entertainers, and made his way to the coast, where he reported the crime and subsequent abomination that had been perpetrated. The report seems almost incredible, but it is given on authority which leaves but little doubt as to its authenticity. Dissatisfaction with the government, of which the officer was the representative, is said to have been the cause of the murder.

A well at Castle Rock, Wis., runs down forty feet through the shale, and then through forty feet of solid rock. At the juncture of the two substances a stream of air pours in so cold that ice forms, and so strong that light things are blown out of the well.

A Canada farmer discovered a pit containing five hundred skulls. Must have been the site of some ancient theatre to have so many dead heads in the pit.

A Cheyenne brave is never so happy as when he has a string of old tomato cans around his neck and is having a war dance or can-can.

A river's mouth is larger than its head, the sea has arms but no hands, and a mountain has a foot but no legs. Queer, isn't it?

In Texas when a man wants to commit suicide he steals a horse, says his prayers, and calmly awaits the inevitable result.

THE BEST REMEDY
for
Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.

In diseases of the pulmonary organs a safe and reliable remedy is invaluable. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL is such a remedy, and no other so eminently secures the confidence of the public. It is a scientific combination of the medicinal principles and curative virtues of the finest drugs, chemically united, of such power as to insure the greatest possible efficiency and uniformity of results. It strikes at the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt relief and rapid cures, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily. In ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Clergyman's Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, and Catarrh, the effects of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL are magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand in every household for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whooping-cough and Consumption there is no other remedy so efficacious, soothing, and helpful.
Low prices are inducements to try some of the many mixtures, or syrups, made of cheap and ineffective ingredients, now offered, which, as they contain no curative qualities, can afford only temporary relief, and are sure to increase and disappoint the patient. Diseases of the throat and lungs demand active and effective treatment; and it is dangerous experimenting with unknown and cheap medicines, from the great inability that these diseases usually, when so fastened with, become deeply seated or incurable. Use AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and you may confidently expect the best results. It is a standard medical preparation, of known and acknowledged curative power, and is as cheap as its careful preparation and fine ingredients will allow. Eminent physicians, knowing its composition, prescribe it in their practice. The test of half a century has proven its absolute certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.
